Chairman's Message

First of all, I would like to convey my heartiest greetings to all our members a very Happy TAMIZH NEW YEAR .

Parliamentary Elections for Tamil Nadu has been scheduled to be held on 19th April 2024. People have started to feel the heat of electioneering campaign launched by various political parties besides the hotness of the summer. It is the duty and responsibility of every citizen to cast their votes as people bear the biggest responsibility in the Democratic system. It is disappointing to note that the electoral turn out in all the three Chennai constituencies was always very poor in all elections despite more number of educated voters present in these constituencies.

"Democracy is the rule of people by the people for the people." - Abraham Lincoln.

There is a need to improve voting and besides Election Commission taking steps to create awareness amongst people their rights and responsibilities of casting votes, Political parties need to introspect why their manifestos and candidates are not able to inspire confidence in voters to come out enthusiastically.

Let us all proud to participate in the Democratic process of Elections by dutifully and diligently casting our votes to the rightful candidates there by expressing our confidence in our Democratic system.

Our next Quarterly meeting is convened to be held on 13th April 2024 at Andhra Chamber of Commerce building, West CIT Nagar, Chennai at 4.30pm to celebrate THAMIZH NEW YEAR and Observance of World Women's Day. Smt. Sudha Ramalingam, a renowned Human Rights Activist and a popular Advocate in Madras High Court will be our chief guest. Her dedication to Justice knows no bounds. In addition to her profession, she runs Mononmani Trust, which assist people in need. She is an ardent fighter against disparities besides in our legal system against marginalized groups including women, Children and socially under privileged. We are proud to say that she is a senior member of our Senior Citizens Bureau and we will be happy to have her amongst us as our Chief Guest and listen to her Speech and interact with her and clear our doubts on many legal issues relating to Laws available for protection and welfare of Senior Citizens and women.

Marked Annually on March 8th, International Women's Day is one of the important days of the year to celebrate Women's Achievements, educate and raise awareness about women's equality, call for positive changes advancing women, lobby for accelerated Gender policy.

This year World Women's Day Theme is Inspire Inclusion.

When we inspire others to understand and value women's Inclusion, we forge a better World. And when women themselves are inspired to be included, there is a sense of belonging, relevance and empowerment.

Inspire Inclusion.

- encourage everyone to recognize the unique perspective and contributions of women from all walks of life, including those from marginalized communities, particularly World Women's Day can drive that recognition.

- Appreciate the Women in your life. Take time to acknowledge and appreciate, express gratitude to the woman who have made a positive impact on you.

With the above theme and objectives of World Women's Day, and in line with our Vision and Mission, We have proposed to conduct our ensuring Quarterly meeting for the Observance of World Women's Day (8th March) along with the celebration of TAMIZH NEW YEAR. It is highly appropriate to have Smt. Sudha Ramalingam as our Chief Guest for the meeting organized to commemorate the observance of World Women's Day. I take this opportunity to personally request all our learned members to please attend the meeting with your spouse unminding of all other inconvenience and make this event a grand success.

I once again wish you all a very happy Tamil New Year.

with regards,

T.V.Nagarajan, Chairman, SCB.

Message from Secretary General

I take this opportunity to wish our members a very happy 'Tamil New year Day'.

We had our first quarterly meeting of this year 2024, on 17th February 2024 at Andhra Chamber of Commerce, Nandanam, Chennai-35. with our popular Cine Director Kalaimamani Shri.S.P. Muthuraman as chief guest.

On that day, the total number participants touched 65, even though our members, attendance was average, guests from our Net Working associates attend in large numbers to listen our chief guest Kalaimamani Shri S.P. Muthuraman.

The meeting commenced at 10 a.m with our Chairman Shri T.V. Nagarajan's usual interesting, welcome speech.

Then our Chief guest Thiru. S.P. Muthuraman who has crossed the age of 90 years, gave very informative speech about spending his time usefully even now. He narrated his experiences starting his carrier, as assistant in film editing sector in AVM Studio Chennai and reached the level of Directing film successfully with leading actors, MGR, SivajiGanesan, Kamal Hasan and Super star Rajnikanth. The entire spectators enjoyed his speech.

Then our Vice Chairman Dr. V. Kanagasabai gave an interesting and thought provoking speech on 'Mental Health'.

The Meeting came to an end with vote of thanks by our treasurer Thiru. N. Sampathkumar.

We are also glad to mention that we have arranged our Quarterly meeting of Celebrating Tamil New year's day on 13th April 2024. The invitation for the same is given in front page of the SCB News.

We are glad to inform that the Chief guest Thirumathi Sudha Ramalingam is our Senior Member and famous social activists. Instead of narrating her Biodata, we have reproduced the article on her, published in the Magazine PROVOKE (Lifestyle) (March 2024 issue) in this issue of SCB News.

With request to all members to attend the event in large numbers. I conclude my report. Thankyou.

Thanking you,

P.Sethu Seshan

SUDHA RAMALINGAM SHARES HER INSIGHTS ON HUMAN RIGHTS ACTIVISM, ADDRESSING ONGOING CHALLENGES, AND FOSTERING TRUE GENDER EQUALITY IN SOCIETY - HARIHARAN M

Sudha Ramalingam, a relentless human rights activist and practising advocate in the Madras High Court, has been a formidable force in championing the rights of the marginalised. From holding pivotal roles in organisations like the People's Union for Civil Liberties to her extensive involvement in factfinding missions addressing issues such as custodial rape and minority rights, Sudha's dedication to justice knows no bounds. In addition to her advocacy work, Sudha runs the Manonmani Trust, which assists people in need.

Her advocacy efforts, spanning from assisting victims of injustice to training policemen and educators on human rights, reflect a deep-rooted passion for societal change. Recognized as one of the leading voices against gender-based violence, Sudha's tireless activism gives hope and inspiration to those striving for a more just and equitable society.

1. What inspired you to become a lawyer and human rights activist?

I always believed that lawyers were the ones who could fight for just causes. My inclination towards argumentation further solidified this belief, with others around me affirming that I had the qualities of a good lawyer.

During my post-graduation, I encountered situations where my classmates faced issues that necessitated legal intervention.

Witnessing how legal aid facilitated remedies reinforced my conviction that the path to justice often leads through the realm of law. So, naturally, I gravitated towards pursuing a career in law. Despite my determination, my parents initially opposed my decision, adhering to traditional gender roles that limited career options for women. Eventually, I succeeded in convincing my parents and secured admission to law school.

As for my involvement in women's rights activism, my quest for justice, especially for women, has always been a driving force. Observing how women often faced greater hurdles and injustices further fueled my commitment to advocating for gender equality. However, I don't limit myself to solely being a women's rights activist; I see myself as a human rights activist. I believe in solidarity among all genders and advocate for the rights of marginalised communities, including trans individuals. In today's world, where recognition of diverse identities is increasing, it's crucial to unite under the banner of human rights activism, transcending narrow categorizations.

2. How do you navigate the intersectionality of gender class, and other factors when fighting for justice for underprivileged women?

As I mentioned earlier, advocating for rights, whether women's rights or those of marginalized genders, was incredibly challenging in the past. People often ridiculed and marginalized those who spoke up for such causes, labeling them as antifamily or anti-establishment. As a woman advocating for these rights, I faced additional scrutiny and prejudice. Courts sometimes dismissed my arguments, suggesting that I should adopt a softer approach due to my gender, rather than seeing me as an advocate in the same light as my male counterparts.

Thankfully, perceptions have gradually shifted, and significant legal advancements have been made, such as the repeal of Section 377 and the recognition of the third gender. Cases involving marginalised communities, especially the third gender, were particularly difficult due to societal unfamiliarity and prejudice. However, despite the obstacles, I remained committed to advocating for their rights. Marginalised individuals often lack a voice and face systemic barriers, making it challenging to secure justice for them.

Yet, it's not impossible, and progress has been made, albeit slowly. Though we've come a long way, achieving true equality remains an ongoing struggle.

3. What changes do you hope to see in the legal system to better support women's rights and gender equality?

Our legal system appears robust, with our constitution emphasizing equality and providing special provisions for various marginalised groups, including women, children, and the socially underprivileged.

However, the reality paints a different picture. Disparities persist, and bridging this gap is imperative.

The journey toward true equality begins at home. We must instill values of equality by treating our children, regardless of gender, with equal opportunities and encouragement. Discrimination often starts within households, where traditional gender roles are perpetuated.

Even within co-educational institutions, the segregation of genders perpetuates stereotypes and hinders true equality. Bridging this gap requires concerted efforts across all levels of society, including education systems, workplaces, and the media. Sensitising people from a young age, through education and awareness campaigns, is crucial to fostering a society where true gender equality is realised in practice, not just on paper.

4. Can you discuss any ongoing challenges or emerging issues in the fight for women's rights that you are currently addressing?

The challenges women face, particularly in the workplace, are significant. Despite laws like Vishaka guidelines, which protect against sexual harassment, women's voices are often stifled, and they fear retaliation if they report misconduct.

This fear stems from societal norms and workplace dynamics that prioritise protecting the accused rather than supporting the victim.

In many cases, women endure harassment silently for fear of repercussions on their careers and personal life. The internal complaints committees set up to address such issues often receive complaints long after the incidents occur, highlighting the pervasive culture of fear and silence.

Addressing these challenges requires a holistic approach that includes sensitising people from a young age, enforcing laws effectively, and creating supportive environments in workplaces and public spaces.

5. What factors contribute to the persistence of gender inequality and discrimination, and how can society address these challenges effectively to achieve true gender equality?

Societal attitudes towards gender equality and feminism have evolved over the years, yet persistent challenges remain.

Lack of awareness about women's rights and impunity among perpetrators contribute to gender inequality.

Changing entrenched beliefs requires multifaceted approaches, including education starting from homes and schools. Despite legal frameworks, patriarchal attitudes and cultural practices like dowry persist, necessitating women's empowerment and societal recognition of their rights.

To achieve true gender equality, we must focus on education beyond literacy, fostering scientific thinking and critical reasoning.

Politicians should lead in promoting evidence-based policies.

Breaking gender stereotypes is crucial for women's equal opportunities in all professions. Additionally, fostering a culture of honesty and accountability is essential to ensure that progress toward equality is not undermined. Collaboration across society is necessary to address deep-rooted inequalities and create a more inclusive and equitable society for all genders.

6. What advice do you offer to young women entering the legal profession?

The legal profession is challenging yet rewarding, demanding dedication and time. Despite financial uncertainties, it empowers individuals to contribute positively to society. Women entering law can drive change and rise in the field, benefiting from various career opportunities. Understanding the law is crucial for everyday life, empowering women to advocate for themselves.

Overall, the legal profession offers continuous learning and the chance to make a meaningful impact while earning a living.

7. How does Manonmani Trust, effectively address the needs of the elderly, victims of domestic violence, and underprivileged students?

Manonmani Trust, established in 2006, operates under the guidance of individuals like D. Saraswathi Varadarajan and N. Hemalatha and myself providing shelter for the elderly/needy and victims of domestic violence through Anbagam at Thirukandam village in Tiruvallur district. The Trust supports education by offering free tuition services, digital resources to underprivileged students and constitutional rights education to school students while also prioritizing rural healthcare through free medical camps. To sustain its impact initiatives it networks with eminent individuals and institutions.

8. What message would you like to convey to women on the International Women's Day?

Approach things scientifically and not succumb to superstitions. We must confront the inequalities we observe and fight for what is right, not swayed by empty praises. Honest, hard work is the cornerstone of meaningful progress, and it's achievable through dedication and perseverance. International Women's Day, celebrated annually, highlights the ongoing struggle for gender equality. Each year, a theme is chosen, yet it's essential to ensure that the issues addressed in previous years are not forgotten. While these designated days prompt reflection on women's issues, every day should be dedicated to empowering women and addressing gender disparities.

International Women's Day emerged from the collective struggles of countless women throughout history, underscoring the importance of ongoing activism and advocacy for women's rights.
